

Dr. Yap Wei Yim is a full-time faculty with the School of Business in the Singapore University of Social Sciences (SUSS). He has more than 20 years of experience spanning the port, shipping, maritime, logistics and industrial park businesses with projects involving private and public entities. They include the Singapore Ministry of Transport, PSA International, SATS Limited and Ascendas-Singbridge among other companies. He was the former head of strategic planning at the Maritime and Port Authority of Singapore. Dr. Yap has also led numerous port-related developments including government-related projects in Mexico, Pakistan, China, Indonesia, Vietnam, Jamaica, Qatar and Solomon Islands. Apart from industry work, Dr. Yap has several publications in international scientific journals and books and is active in the international maritime and port community. His latest book entitled “Business and Economics of Port Management: An Insider’s Perspective” is a comprehensive reference for insights into the workings of port industry. The book provides in-depth discussions on strategic issues, challenges and disruptions that are faced by this industry. The book also comes with useful case studies and lessons from different port regions around the world.